In Pursuit of Excellence

Thiruvananthapuram 695 004
Kerala, India.

The Nair Service Society, which has been in the forefront of education and employment in Kerala, has launched a new initiative to establish an Academy of Civil Services to mould the youth to guide the destiny of the nation.

The Academy will equip young men and women of Kerala to meet the challenges of the Civil Services Examination and secure high positions at the national level.

Situated in a spacious campus in the heart of Thiruvananthapuram, near the Mahatma Gandhi College, with state of the art facilities and brilliant academic and administrative staff, it will be the premium institution of its kind in the country.

NACS was designed by a group of eminent experts led by former Ambassador T.P.Sreenivasan.

NACS will have the necessary facilities, including a library, with an abundant collection of the latest books and periodicals on shelves as well as on computers, with excellent connectivity. Aspirants will be encouraged to become computer savvy for research and social networking.

NACS will open its doors to the first batch of aspirants on July 1, 2012 to prepare them for the Aptitude Test, the Main Examination and the Personality Test in 2013. A rigorous process of selection will commence in June 2012 to select the NACS aspirants. Graduates between the ages of 20 and 29 will be eligible. Their previous academic record and proven ability to cope with strenuous training will be the criteria for selection. NACS will also have long-term courses for young aspirants, at different levels of school and college education.

Apart from providing instructions in the subjects of choice for the three stages of the examination, NACS will have programmes for personality development, language skills and leadership qualities. Personal attention will be given to each aspirant by the faculty.

The aspirants will have ample opportunities to interact with senior civil service officers, writers, eminent educators of national and international repute, social, cultural and political leaders so that they develop a holistic and broad outlook on men and matters.

Progress will be monitored and strict discipline enforced at all times. To attain the objective, there is no alternative to sustained and hard work.

Were not attained by a sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upwards in the night."*
